NEW YEAR, JUDGMENT DAY FOR ALL THE WORLD

Once upon a time, an ancient time, the Jews of Judaea, from wherever they happened to be in the great Roman Empire, sent back the shekels which provided for the upkeep of the Temple. Whatever they had to know, such as the right date to observe the New Year festival, or an important opinion about the Law and its observance, and other weighty matters, they asked of the patriarch in Jerusalem in letters, awaiting reply with a steadfast faith which aroused so much admiration among many pagan Romans that they joined the Jewish membership.

However, there were plenty of other Romans who made fun of the joiners and the Jews, and the Romans who approved of the Jewish principles without joining. There were still others who gave in to some good, old-fashioned hatred from deep inside, not for their own people but for the Jews who had the nerve to set themselves up as advocates of bigger and better beliefs. What were they trying to do, anyway? Break up the accustomed way of Roman life and substitute something nonsensical and different just to be diverse and subversive?

The Book of Esther records how Haman, the Hitler of his day, pointed out falsely to King Ahasuerus the prevalence of these "certain people in all the provinces of the Kingdom whose laws were different from those of every people", and who failed to keep the King's laws, so that it was useless to stand for them. To the Jews "the law of the land is the law", and they did keep it. But, where they fell down was in their refusal to accept the emperor as divine, or even semi-divine, and so they were regarded as damaging to unity.

They were not wiped out, though, because they were saved by one of the neatest moves in history. Mordecai, the Jew, became Prime Minister, and his beautiful niece, Esther, became Queen. Haman was hanged on a scaffold of specified height, and a fine job it was all around, including his sons, as it did.

But, remember: the uniqueness of the Jews; the fact that they were "not as other nations"; their exclusion partly because of their religion, partly for the superficial claim that, whereas the Romans could eat Jewish food, the Jews could not eat Roman food with them; or tolerate their gods, either, for that matter, an attitude which was construed against good manners; and an assumption of superiority which was regarded as arrogant.

The Jews were different, they were aloof. They were aloof, they were different. Their Chosen People claim, and their inward obligation and compulsion to teach about the Living God, rubbed the Romans the wrong way. The Roman writer, Tacitus, called the Jews "the hate of the human race". At the same time synagogue adherents grew in number through the zeal of Jewish missionaries and their easy successes showed considerable Roman discontent with Roman society which was riddled with corruption.

Family life was falling apart. Adultery and murder were not exceptional. On the other hand, the Jews were living strictly with such pride of family and observance of their religious teachings that the Roman writers felt forced to assail their Jewish God who forbade immorality. They dragged down the Jews with slander and rumor that incited the rabble to slaughter, not only then, but ever after, then and now, in similar pattern.

The libertines had no intention of reforming and the only way they saw of ridding themselves of critics-by-example was to destroy them. In and out of the centuries, the Jews, far from perfect themselves, still have had something continuing to say to other peoples about an established morality that was divinely ordered long, long ago. Those who wanted to destroy the critic, or the goad, as you like, have gone down in fury. The Jews remain, they survive, they are there, even as a remnant, even in the presence of their own weaknesses and frequent inabilities to live up to the holy law.

In themselves they are not omnipotent but they do point to Omnipotence. The Mestrovic bronze bust of Moses in the Toronto Art Gallery tells you all about it. His head and neck were sculpted to show great physical and spiritual power and drive, and a sharp reminder of fire. One hand rests on a shoulder, the index finger pointing upward to the Source of his inspiration. He will not take no for an answer: Judaism can do nothing less than to rebuke every kind of immorality forever.

This New Year the Jews of the world are faced with the incredible, the unbelievable, staggering fact that, despite the Nazi holocaust of planned torture and murder, in planned gas chambers and prison camps, which is so fresh in the present that witnesses are still being sought all over the world to testify against the perpetrators, a deliberate incitement to a return engagement of horror in new places is in process, and even against some of the heaviest recent sufferers of a terrible Hitler frenzy against the stranger, the newcomer, the unlike, the different.

This drunken search for scapegoat material and its capture is a manifestation of the true Anti-Semitism as differentiated from latent prejudice. This kind produces in full view pillage, pogroms, branding irons, and an inhumanity so shameful and irrational as to brutalize the world into a long period of open barbarianism. Little wonder that the Roman Catholic and Protestant churches fear for their future under such a threat to the foundation of the Christian religion as racial paganism, stirred up with the will to hate and all the dehumanizing crudities of the darkest ages.

This New Year, once again streams of blameless people are moving out and away as uprooted, homeless, displaced refugees, even from home sites of antiquity. Tens of thousands, burdened by anxiety and quivering with fear, are faced with the necessity of remaking their homes and their lives. They know one thing, however: "All Israel is responsible, one for the other." Rivers of money have helped before and will do that again. How else could it be among Jews?

"I, As A Christian, Extend To The Jewish People The Hand Of Friendship And Of Love"

Address at the Opening of the Canadian Jewish Congress Convention in Toronto at which Madame Vanier was also Present

BY HIS EXCELLENCY MAJOR-GENERAL GEORGES P. VANIER, D.S.O., M.C., C.D., THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF CANADA

I consider it a great honour to have been asked to open your conference, the more so as this is the second time that I have been invited to meet with you. In this city, less than three years ago, we celebrated the 200th anniversary of the first settlement of Jews in Canada. We were then concerned with the past. It is right that we should have been, that we should always be, for the past is an integral part of a people's destiny.

The contribution of Canadian Jewry during these 200 years is an important chapter in the life of our country: so also will it be reckoned proudly in that of the Jews. Though but an episode in that more ancient record, it is worthy of its place, in keeping with its grandeur.

In the annals of time there is no more powerful story than that of the Jews. Its four thousand years of history reveal every facet of man's nature in achievement and tragedy. It is a record of courage, perseverance, and hope, qualities without which the Jews, scattered throughout the world, would never have survived; qualities which alone made possible the re-establishment of Israel; qualities which in that marvellous land today challenge the imagination.

It is, as I have said, a powerful story, a source of great pride for all of you. But it is also more than that. It is a heritage, a sacred trust from your fathers not to be treated as credentials of whence you come but as an inspiration for whither you go. The past, however glorious, loses its meaning or character if it cannot live in the present and cannot be passed on to the future. Yesterday must be linked with today and tomorrow, if life is to have any meaning. One great link is tradition.

The story of the Jews tells of man's anxiety about his relationship with his God and with his neighbour. The Old Testament, gift of the Jews to other religions and to many hundreds of millions of people throughout the world, is a witness to this interior struggle. The laws it enunciates, the purpose it declares, have provided the foundations of order and morality. To quote from Leviticus: "And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying . . . thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself: I am the Lord."

The story of the Jews, which is an inspiration, is also a warning. The persecution and tragedy of the past are history's lessons which should be heeded by all. They testify to what can happen when man forsakes his values, they are a cogent reminder of how easily mistakes are repeated.

Although mankind cannot go back and correct its mistakes, it can and must go forward and, aware of past sins, avoid future ones. In going forward, mindful of tradition, let us continue: 'to strive, to seek, to find and not to yield.' One cannot but think of what is going on in Israel. Before our eyes, in barely a generation, we have seen the realization of a hope which wise men once called chimerical. Such is the fruit of courage and perseverance.

There is a tradition in Jewish history to which I wish to pay particular tribute, namely its dedication to the preservation of family life. This is a subject to which I am devoting special attention during my tenure of office. May I quote the sentiments expressed by Her Majesty The Queen in reply to a toast proposed by the President of India at a State Dinner given in Delhi in January, 1961:

"The family group is the vital and continuing factor in a country's social structure. Families are the bricks from which all human societies are built. If the bricks are sound the edifice will endure."

The family is the fundamental institution of our society. This is the message of time, richly documented in the Old Testament, as it is also by the history of the Jewish people. The family is the essential element of the community without which it cannot exist. And the strength of the family is the exact measure of the strength of the community. The loyalties, moral and religious values of the one are the image of the other. The disintegration of the family leads to poverty, disease, and juvenile delinquency. Each of us has a part to play, a definite responsibility to discharge. In congratulating the Jewish people I urge them to strengthen the bonds which they already respect and maintain.

A diversified nation, we are from many lands, of many races, and of many creeds. But this diversity does not preclude unity. We hold in common a belief in God. We hold in common a Crown, embodiment of law and order, moral values and binding loyalties. We hold in common a belief: "Thou shalt love thy neighbour.' We hold

"In The Environment In Which We Live Religion Cannot Be Removed From The Public School"

Presentation on Religious Education In Public Schools to the Canadian Jewish Congress Convention

BY RABBI WILFRED SHUCHAT, OF SHAAR HASHOMAYIM SYNAGOGUE, IN MONTREAL

In the United States the problem of religious education in the public schools is constitutionally regulated in the principle of the separation of Church and State. This "separation" was not due to any inherent objection to religious education as such or to any spirit of neutralism about religious values but rather it was a reaction against the European practice of "establishment" and the risk of one religious group dominating the community. It was clearly an effort to protect minority religious groups from which principle the Jewish community has certainly benefitted.

This, however, has not been the tradition of Great Britain. In Great Britain there is an "established" church with special provisions made for minority religious groups to establish their own schools within the government system and to receive grants and subsidies.

It is a quite remarkable fact in view of the history of Canada in general and of its Jewish community in particular that on this issue Canadian practice has followed the American and not the British precedent. It is important to note this fact because the recommendation with which I intend to conclude and the case history which I will describe is essentially a British precedent.

In Canada there is no provision for separatism of Church and State though many educators and public officials have acted as though there were such a provision and have argued either on the basis of such an assumption existing or the need for its creation. Probably Jewish spokesmen of our public bodies have been most outspoken in this regard largely because Jewish status has so much at stake.

Now if the principle of "separatism" were to be universally acceptable there would be no problem. Certainly the Jewish community has never experienced the need of using the public school for the dissemination of Judaism. The principle of "separatism", or, at any rate, the present practice of "separatism" in most Canadian public schools, is not universally acceptable. It is not acceptable to the people who count the most, by which I mean the majority community.

The majority Protestant community, and this includes the Province of Quebec where Jews are grouped with the Protestants for educational purposes, are not satisfied. They feel their religious goals are being compromised. We should not be surprised at this fact and should indeed regard it as only natural. In the one area of the world where Jews are a majority, this is exactly the way our fellow Jews have reacted.

Every school in Israel by Government decree has introduced the "Jewish Consciousness Program" with exemptions and all the other safeguards for the Moslem and Christian communities. Why, therefore, should we be surprised when the Protestant Community is stirred to introduce religious education into the public schools? They look upon it as their schools and Canada as a Christian country. Who can say that they are wrong?

There are a number of ways in which one can react to the introduction of religious education into the public schools and the Jewish Community has reacted in all of these ways in different places.

The first reaction, the majority reaction in Canada and the United States, has been to affirm the principle of separation of Church and State, to oppose the introduction of religious education in the public schools even with safeguards, and to go down fighting, if necessary, on this principle.

The second reaction has been to demand safeguards for Jewish status. These safeguards have included a plea for exemption of Jewish children, a plea which is usually granted but which most Jewish parents do not use because of alleged fears of the segregation of their children. Other safeguards have been the request that such programs be abandoned in those schools when Jewish children are the majority or a substantial minority.

Another reaction has been a suggestion that such instruction take place during the last hour of the school day so that those who do not take part might return home without any of the side-effects of minority status. In New York City, this program became transformed into the Release Time Plan when the schools released the children for an hour a week so that they might be available for religious instruction of their choice. WHERE IS THE LORD? THE STILL SMALL VOICE?

BY DR. LOUIS J. CASHDAN, RABBI OF TEMPLE EMANU-EL, IN TORONTO, ONTARIO

This holiest season of our religious calendar makes me mindful of an incident in the life of the prophet Elijah. Elijah had fled from Ahab, the King of Israel, and Jezebel, the Queen, who had threatened him with death. He was in a disconsolate mood. How could he escape the wrath of the idolatrous and avaricious queen? Where was the Lord whose cause he had so constantly and courageously championed? Where was the God of Israel for whose sake he had struggled and whose honor he had defended? Where, O, where was the Lord?

This was the query and the quest of the solitary prophet as he wended his way toward the mount known as the Mount of the Lord. When he arrived at Mount Sinai he was in an expectant mood, awaiting the revelation that would come to him, but he wondered how the Lord would make Himself known, how and when the Lord would appear, and whether he would recognize God's presence.

The Bible gives us a vivid description of Elijah's encounter with God. We learn that a great and strong wind passed by and rent the mountain and broke in pieces the rock, but the Lord was not in the wind; and after the wind an earthquake, but the Lord was not in the earthquake; and after the earthquake, a fire, but the Lord was not in the fire; and after the fire, a still small voice, and Elijah knew that he had sensed the presence of the living God. The experience of Elijah is one which comes to most people at some time in their lives. What man is there, who either in an honest search for God, or in a moment of anguish, or even doubt, has not asked: Where is the Lord? In such a search, we may stray from the by-paths of life, from the usual routine of our existence, and find ourselves in the presence of divinity.

There are those who feel that they are standing before God, when they envision the enthralling beauty of an enduring work of art, or they may find their inspiration in music, poetry, or an absorbing book. Others may discover a partial answer to their query, "Where is the Lord?", in the vibrant beauty of nature, or in the enchanting view of a sunset. Such moods of exaltation may be transient. In times as critical as these, other thoughts may intrude upon us. We may tend to contrast the peaceful serenity of a country scene with the tension and uncertainty of human existence in our troubled world today. While we may seek God in a work of art or in the art of nature, we may fail to discern his spirit in the life of man.

The question, "Where is the Lord?", has been re-echoed in every generation by men of deep faith as well as by agnostics and cynics. The uncertainties of our age are charged with doubt. Time and again I have had people in all walks of life hurl the challenge of the tempestuous prophet Elijah at me, and ask: "Where is the Lord in this age of unrest and turmoil, of threat and counter-threat? Where is the Lord in a civilization poised at the edge of a pernicious volcano which may erupt at any moment? All of us can benefit from the revelation that came to Elijah and learn where the Lord is not likely to be, before we can become receptive to His presence.

The Lord is not likely to be in the wind or fire, not in the violent upheavals that have shaken the human foundations of our generation, not in the raging fires ignited by hate and lust for power; not in the mushroom blast of an atomic explosion, but in the still, small voice, reminding us that man-made weapons can, if their use is unrestrained, destroy civilization, and that man still has a chance to choose between the destructive and the constructive uses of the findings of science.

We gain an insight into where the Lord is not, through the names of the dreaded rocket missiles of our time. They appropriately bear the names of pagan gods. Atlas, Jupiter, Thor, and a host of other pagan deities have been resurrected in our generation, and we vacillate in our loyalty to this neo-paganism and our devotion to the Almighty Sovereign of the universe. We have not been able to make up our minds whether to place our trust in Atlas or in the God of our fathers. The missiles bearing divine names have assumed a reality more potent in our time than their names exercised upon the heathens who worshipped them in the days of old.

Where is the Lord? Surely, He is not in a rocket that has fired a missile and hit a target nine thousand miles away. Surely, he is not in the atomic dreadnoughts of our time. We reach the height of human folly and are guilty of idolatry when we seek the Lord in the thermodynamic nuclear explosion of our time.

A civilization that has learned to stop, look, and listen before passing a railroad crossing, must certainly be on the alert for the still small voice, the divine prodding of our conscience, before we entrust our destiny to the pagan gods, the work of our hands. We must not allow the Atlases and the Jupiters to become the sole guardians of our way of life, to become the pagan sentinels of our security.

The still small voice which Elijah heard, this eternal echo of divinity, can be heard above the din and tumult of our time. It cannot be recorded on tape, or transmitted through the media of an electronic age. The most sophisticated stereophonic system cannot reproduce the still small voice. Only man, only the human receiver, is endowed with the spiritual dimension and the high fidelity to hear the voice of the Lord above the cacophony, above the discordant sounds of our time. The still small voice is the voice of the Master of the universe transmitted through the universal channel, man. It has been recorded by the high fidelity of the Torah and released to all men whose hearts are attuned to its message.

The still small voice which answered Elijah in his time of need is amplified for us during this season of High Fidelity. Centuries of tradition have imparted to the ten days of repentance an aura of holiness. Rosh Hashonah and Yom Kippur tend to heighten our spiritual sensitivity. Our High Holy Days have developed for us an intimate and personal formula for listening to the still small voice. And this formula can have a redemptive influence upon mankind. The still small voice finds its reverberations in the voice of humanity, seeking to right the wrongs of the past, of a humanity which is becomingly increasingly attentive to the imperative voice of the downcast, the oppressed, the exploited.

The still small voice is the voice of our faith and reason admonishing and at the same time encouraging us with the knowledge that we must be at peace with our neighbor before we can be at peace with God.

The still small voice is the voice of hope inherent in the idea of atonement. Atonement would be meaningless if we did not believe in the possibility of self-improvement and the realization of our dreams and hopes for a better world.

On a more personal level we feel the still small voice in the beauty of a family life, in true friendship, in loving acts of self-denial, in our search for truth, for beauty and for peace. In the simple and intimate glimpses of man, the beauty of life is as evident as it is in the charm of nature. Man, like nature, can be relentless, but also like nature he can reflect the spirit of divinity. As wind, earthquake, and fire have not been able to obscure the vision of God in the physical realm, so the weaknesses and the follies of men will not be able to silence the still small voice to which humanity must always be responsive.

The Canadian Jew: Canada's Future Is His Future

BY MARY SWADRON, 3 BROOKE AVENUE, TORONTO

When a primitive culture encounters a more sophisticated "civilization" the primitive society disintegrates. This is a well-established historical fact repeated time and again in such different environments as Australia, Hawaii, the Orient, and the Americas.

In Canada the Indians fought this bitter and losing struggle despite the intervention of the conquerors' governments who made belated efforts to support and preserve the less aggressive aspects of native Indian culture. It is true the disappearance of these ancient peoples is never one hundred percent: this would defy the laws of nature. But their blood or racial characteristic which is still active in eighth or ninth generation Canadians, is no longer Indian and for all practical purposes it now belongs to another cultural strain, most likely French or British.

Jews never waged the Indian struggle for survival, at least not in Canada. They have had, or rather their relatives have had, parallel experiences in other parts of the world. In the Middle East there are remnant groups of ancient Hebraic culture, the degeneracy of which is a serious problem to the new State of Israel. In Europe, particularly in the middle part, there are also remnant groups of very strict Orthodox cults. Some groups of these extreme Orthodox wings emigrated under the extreme pressure of anti-Semitism. Although they were wary enough to realize that extreme Orthodoxy would not flourish in Canada, once here, they refused to compromise. Needless to say their lot has not been a happy one.

The general pattern of the pioneer days in Canada was a wide open one in many respects. Canada lacked its own set tradition of a native aristocracy and the Colonial tradition had a limited influence. The French regime did not last long enough to spread its influence outside the Province of Quebec. British colonial power which profoundly affected the laws and government of Canada, still left a lot untouched. Perhaps it was native British wisdom or probably there was more than enough to struggle with as it was.

In a country peopled largely by rebels, adventurers, and idealists, the few Jews that came here were no special problem. The earliest Jews were traders. For a country whose livelihood depended on the progress of the fur trade, they were more than welcome. The first few Jews were of Dutch origin, probably refugees from the Inquisition. The first Synagogue in Canada was the Spanish and Portuguese one, "Shearith Israel", founded in 1768 in Montreal, so there must have been a fair-sized community of this sect already established for a period of years.

In 18th century Canada, if any group considered the economic pattern difficult, the political one irksome, or disliked the social code, they were always able to pick up and move further West where there was a prospect of free land and fresh opportunities. True, to travel further West under prevailing conditions required courage or at least great nerve. But this was the custom of the time and custom seems to soften hardship. Like thousands of others, Jews made use of these opportunities and kept moving westward.

The 19th century brought many of the problems of the Industrial Revolution and imposed them on a country still suffering from pioneer hardships. Jewish immigrants poured in among the thousands of others, particularly towards the end of the century and the beginning of the 20th, which brought the shiploads of famine victims from Ireland.

The largest flood of Jewish immigration entered the country after the Czarist persecutions of 1910-11. A new type of middle-European immigrant began to appear from Poland, Russia, Hungary, Austria etc. Most of them were urban peoples accustomed to earn their living as small traders or unskilled factory workers. They did not belong on the farms and flocked in large numbers into the cities and towns. Some were remarkably successful, started new industries and businesses. Financial success eased their adaptation to the new country. These people were the source of fabulous success stories related in the smallest hamlets of Europe. Thousands came to emulate their example but instead were faced with grim realities.

The largest number of Jews flowed into the ranks of the urban working class and stayed there. It is true there were great compensations as compared with their former life in Europe. They were free to form organizations and schools and to spread their own ideas and customs. Many retreated into small Orthodox cults mentioned earlier in this article. Others founded, or drifted into, revolutionary groups, preached Marxism or socialist doctrines, but in reality attempting to acquire a better share of the country's wealth.

These groups were the dismay of both religious and established Canadian Jews whose efforts to rid the country of them, or at least subdue them, were continuously doomed to failure. In addition to their numerical superiority, these working-class organizations had not only moral, but frequently some financial, support from former members who had worked themselves up through the ranks. The fact was most Jews were liberals and extremely touchy on the subject of freedom, whether of speech or organization.

Oddly enough, these working class groups were more successful in the propagation of Jewish culture than the Orthodox groups. The students of these working peoples' schools learned, on the whole, a simpler type of culture, more closely related to their immediate past and present home life, retained more of their knowledge, and thus have had a wider influence than the Orthodox Talmud Torah whose original function was to prepare students for the Rabbinate or develop a scholarly group of men of rabbinical calibre such as had existed in Europe.

A different aspect created by the flood of European Jewish immigration to Canada was the transplanting of old hatreds among groups from different countries. Few second generation Canadians realize the extent to which a Polish Jew could hate a German Jew and visa versa. These dislikes or even hatreds extended over a dozen or so different countries and sometimes even between peoples of different cities. Fortunately many Jews had a good sense of humour in making themselves the butts of their own jokes. Such hates were reduced to absurdities and form a good part of Jewish humour. Nevertheless, underneath these jokes were genuine problems. The large number of individual Jewish organizations even in a small community is a legacy of this hatred to some extent.

The real problems of Jews were those of Canadians as a whole. Most difficult of all was the general problem of unemployment and seasonal lay-offs which the government began to be faced with periodically in the cities. As the Jewish people lived mainly in the cities, it became a Jewish problem. Economically it affected hundreds of small employers who were continually setting up fresh businesses and going bankrupt, and dragged along with them thousands of workers.

The Jewish people began to organize and re-organize their charitable and service institutions. They made every effort to hire or find work for their own people to save them from becoming public charges. It had a peculiar by-product. A Jewish laborer or employer would leave his Jewish home in a Jewish neighborhood in the morning, go to work among other Jews during the day and return to spend the evening among Jewish friends or in a Jewish organization. Thus the Jews tended to remain with their own kind, having very limited contact with other Canadians.

Inversely, Canadians from rural districts and even sections of large cities had no real knowledge of Jews as a group. Under these circumstances serious misunderstandings were developed and fostered on both sides.

An event in Europe, which probably passed unnoticed in the Canadian newspapers of the time, was to be of widespread importance to Canadian Jews. It was the publication of Theodor Herzl's "Judenstaat", a book which outlined a plan for resettlement of Jews in Palestine. Herzl was heralded by religious Jews as a Messiah and by the more prosaic as a man with the practical solution for cleaning up the ghettos and relieving the over-population of Europe.

The support and respect he elicited from all classes of people, the poorest to royalty, gave him a position of commanding influence. Like so many brilliant men, his influence became apparent only long after his death. In Canada, Herzl's Zionism became the most important Jewish organization simply because it was flexible enough to attract even the extremes of all classes.

The growing upper middle class found in Canadian Zionism an unending need for their philanthropic sponsorship: the lower middle class, rapidly being recruited from the workers' ranks found in Zionism a common interest with their wealthier compatriots. Even in the smallest communities, too small to support a Synagogue, a Zionist club exists.

Part of the Zionist program was to recruit "pioneers" or settlers from Canada. Some Canadians did emigrate but in very limited numbers. Zionism was largely confined to fund-raising in Canada. Primarily it was and is a middle-class movement and middle-class Jews were and are perfectly satisfied in Canada.

The First World War brought great changes to Canada. Immediately following the War, there was another flood of immigration. By the time the prosperity of the Twenties had trickled out, the Government stepped in and adopted restrictive immigration. By the Thirties, the European situation had deteriorated to a degree that affected the whole world. The phenomenal rise of National Socialism terrified Canadian-Jews, even those whose families had been here for generations.

The immediate effect was a retreat to their own kind, a parallel nationalism which found outlets in enlarging the memberships of Jewish Congress, Jewish Community Chests, Y.M.H.A. etc. Political lobbies were organized to have the Canadian Government intervene on behalf of maltreated Jews in Europe, to hasten the realization of the State of Israel and to open the Canadian door to European refugees. These are but a few of the more important efforts. Above all the Canadian Jew was determined to "do something".

Consequently, when the Second World War broke out, thousands of Jews enlisted. Many individuals, deeply affected by the horror stories, considered the last war a Jewish crusade, but these were extreme cases. Most threw their lot in as Canadians, a part of the British Commonwealth.

A characteristic of Canadian history has been the dual pull of British institutions on the one side and American ones on the other with the additional pull of large French-speaking Quebec as another factor. The particular attraction of Canadian Jews to Amer-

The Influence Of The Shofar, The Horn, In The Life Of The Jews

BY REVEREND NATHAN STOLNITZ, 23 LAURELCREST AVENUE, TORONTO

Year in and year out, in all corners of Israel's dispersion on the eve of the High Holy Days much is written and said about the "shofar", (horn) so much indeed that it seems sometimes that everything that could be said has already been expressed. In order not to repeat what has been said we shall outline the vital place of the shofar, not so much from the point of view of religious law as from the music lover's position, and shall also introduce the views of various scholars and thinkers.

It is known, of course, that the shofar was not only the first musical instrument among Jews to create the most exalted religious, or rather divine, mood at the time of the revelation of the Torah but has also served in all periods of Jewish history as a means of awakening and stimulating the spiritual flame among the people. The symbol of the ram's horn links us at once to the story of the Sacrifice of Isaac and the eternal hope in the coming of the Messiah.

The first duty of this primitive wind instrument is quite familiar to us at the very first act of Revelation. When the Creator appeared on Mount Sinai to deliver the Law it was accompanied by the shofar blast. The scriptural passage reads: "And the sound of the ram's horn waxed louder and louder", (Exodus, XIX: 19).

The Psalms say, "He manifested Himself with the sound of the shofar", (Psalm 47), a passage that is repeated seven times at the New Year's service before each series of shofar soundings. Likewise in one of the Mussaf prayers it is expressed again: "With the shofar blast, raise joyful voices before the King, the Lord".

Many explanations have been given for why we blow the ram's horn. Saadia Gaon, the great scholar of the tenth century, gave ten reasons. The basic one is that Rosh Hashonah marks the birth date of the world, the day when God became Ruler of all. It has always been a custom to blow a horn at the crowning of a monarch as a confirmation of his right to the throne as David says in the Psalms: "With trumpets and shofar raise joyful voices before the King, the Lord". At the same time the shofar served as a vital national and religious factor to Jewry in heralding the seasons of the year and all the festivals of the year: "Sound the shofar on the New Moon, on the time appointed for the festive day, a statute for Israel, an ordinance of the God of Jacob".

Often the shofar was used for the purpose of strengthening national pride and stimulating devotion to the name and glory of one's people; mainly this was during the wars in the period of the Israelites' sovereignty on their own soil. The shofar had yet another function, as a signal of freedom and emancipation. When a jubilee year would occur, thousands of enslaved persons would be liberated and property that had been sold under duress and out of need would be returned to the previous owners. Here it was the sound of the shofar that symbolized the restitution of an order of righteousness and justice.

This establishes how the mystic echo of the ram's horn best served the goal of awakening among the people the feelings of spiritual and moral exaltation. The shofar, too, in Jewish tradition is meant to recall the Sacrifice of Isaac to us. It is made of the horn of a ram, and it was a ram that served as the sacrifice in Isaac's place. Basically the Sacrifice of Isaac is the symbol of self-sacrifice, the highest willingness to die for the Sanctification of the Name, as the "selichoth" of Rosh Hashanah put it: "Remember the covenant of Abraham and the sacrifice of Isaac . . . and return in mercy to the remnant of thy people Israel."

In the Psalms we read in "Hallelujah," the short but warm and cheerful verse of praise that has been incorporated into the daily prayer ritual, how praise of the Eternal is stimulated not only in word and tone but through sounds and instrumental music, the shofar above all: "Praise him with the blast of the shofar"; and later: "Praise him with psaltery and harp," Incidentally, this same psalm has been used as the theme for the greatest liturgical composers, and is today used as the climax and often as an accompanying piece for general symphonic concerts and in secular music.

A certain interest in this primitive wind instrument has been expressed by non-Jewish musicians and an effort has been made to simulate in part the shofar blast in their orchestral compositions in Biblical themes on occasions where certain scenes are meant to evoke a mystic mood. It is quite noticeable in certain passages in Wagner's mystic operas of the Four Ring series where imitative shofar blasts are heard in moments of great stress, as signals for desperate cries of help.

In the Italian school of opera within some of the historical pieces an imitative ram's horn blast is frequently used to add a certain authenticity and immediacy to certain scenes. In army and civilian camps to this day the most frequently used instrument is the bugle, an instrument which best gives the effect of the shofar sound.

Many leading scholars and objectives critics of our day have shown their interest in and admiration of the influence of the shofar. Both Einstein and Freud were interested in it, according to an article by A. Leyeles (in the Tog-Morgen Journal, 16 September, 1955).

Theodor Reik, a disciple of Sigmund Freud, and himself a leading psycho-analyst, has given us an insight into the meaning of the shofar blast in Jewish religious life in his examination of the hidden motivations of the human psyche. Comparing and contrasting it with various rites among primitive tribes he has drawn conclusions that have to do with religious stimulation in general and Jewish religious reactions in particular. After citing the diverse views of Aaron Zeitlin and the late Joseph Opatoshu, Leyeles concludes his essay as follows:

"My view is somewhat different. The essential point is what Jewish thought specifically contributed to the development of religion. The special value of the Jewish contribution consists in the fact that it penetrated to the highest, the most purely spiritual peaks, to heights where no other people had ascended. The same applies to the shofar. It became the symbol of spiritual stock-taking, of the 'answerability' and justice of religion."

A well-thought-out essay on "the language of the shofar" was published some years ago by Rabbi Tzvi-Hirsh Cohen of sacred memory, the former senior rabbi of the Montreal community (in the Jewish Eagle of September 21, 1941). He wrote: "There are times when human feelings are so strong that they surpass the limits of mere words to convey and even poetry is no longer capable of its expression. Another language borrowed from other spheres must be utilized. This has neither talk, nor words, nor syllables, yet it conveys more than entire dictionaries. This language is the idiom of music. The shade and nuance of a sound is capable of inspiring the listener to complete absorption in the spiritual, freeing him from all material sensuality.

"These are sounds that lift us up and enable us to exist for a while in other spheres and in another world. Through the changes in vibration we can move from the deepest despond to the peak of ecstasy. The instrument is the same but the arrangement of the sounds can provide the alterations, the shifts from joy to sadness. The shofar-sound belongs to this language of music. But it is much more than this; it is a celestial language, the speech of angels.

"The language of music is composed according to the sensitivity and capacity of the composer. The basic point is to hear and to receive the sounds. One must know how to hear them . . . to appreciate the delicate vibrations and the movements. Not only the ear but the heart must receive the sound of the shofar. One must understand the inner devotion, the private secrets, the subtle hints and suggestions within it . . ."

Throughout our entire two-thousand-year history it has always been among the most deeply held wishes of our people to hear the Shofar of the Messiah. Three times daily we prayed in the "Eighteen Blessings" (Shemonah Essrah): "Let sound the great shofar trumpet of our freedom." The shofar, therefore, does not only assume the foremost place among our musical instruments but is a symbol of our people's freedom. Not only is our rich national past associated with it but also our future. Every year, even though we resolve so faithfully that the coming year will be one of the real redemption, nevertheless we do not suffer disappointment and do not weary of resuming our hopes and in fact put aside a preparatory period of thirty days to announce the forthcoming new year and recurrent day of judgment.

The blast of the shofar is a warning to all that it is time to take a spiritual accounting and to prepare one's thoughts for a new year with which we always identify our deep faith and renewed hope for our future national liberation.

The shofar provokes an atmosphere of fear and trembling which is noticeable in an almost tangible way in the silent awe that grips the congregation when it hears the single-toned but deeply-moving shofar notes. At the same time, however, it also calls forth a mood of gladness among the same worshippers. This can be seen at the end of the "awesome days" on Yom Kippur when the synagogue-goers are ready to leave full of renewed faith and hopefulness and when the doors of heaven have received their supplications just before shutting.

The shofar signal is heard in

There Can Be No Complacency In 5723

BY SAMUEL BRONFMAN, OF MONTREAL, CHAIRMAN OF THE NORTH AMERICAN EXECUTIVE, AND VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE WORLD JEWISH CONGRESS

It is just twenty-five years since the World Jewish Congress tried to alert Jewry and the world at large to the threat posed by the rise of Hitler.

It is a quarter of a century in which our generation was shocked by the unspeakable horror that engulfed and destroyed the mass of European Jewry. It is also a quarter of a century in which we saw the miracle of the nations of the world restore the State of Israel to its rightful people and thus correct the wrong of two thousand years.

The World Jewish Congress played its part in this great and historic development with its beneficial effects for all of Jewry. It has equally played its part in supporting Jewish communities in many parts of the world, in helping to create a better understanding, a better appreciation of the Jewish people amongst the citizens of many free and enlightened lands.

The passing years, however, continue to witness tragedy and upheaval in many other lands. In some, age-old Jewish communities have been forced to flee; in others, communities of more recent root have been surprised by an upsurge of bigotry frequently bearing violence.

The news headlines in one morning constitute a somber reminder of that warning issued by the World Jewish Congress twenty-five years ago: "London Court Starts Hearings on Anti-Semites; Plotted to Kill Jews"; "Anti-Jewish Slogans Appear on Wall of Jewish Cemetery in Germany"; "New Anti-Semitic Attacks Reported in Buenos Aires."

These are the headlines of 1962. They bring again into sharp focus the vital need for the continued activity of the World Jewish Congress in its role of helping to safeguard the rights of Jewry wherever menaced by violent assault, or crumbling under a deliberate erosion denying them the facilities to maintain their desired existence as Jews.

There was no place for serenity a quarter of a century ago. There can be no complacency today.

To meet the challenge, a determined alert has been sounded throughout the globe by the World Jewish Congress, assuring Jewry that, as it hopefully faces the New Year, there will be no complacency in the global structure to which so many communities turn for advice, for support, for renewed strength in times of crisis.

With Warm Greetings to our Jewish Friends at the New Year

Canada Must Give The Immigrant Full Liberty In Canadian Life

Address at the Annual Meeting of the Jewish Immigrant Aid Services, at the Windsor Hotel, in Montreal

BY THE HONOURABLE PAUL GERIN-LAJOIE, MINISTER OF YOUTH OF THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

The educational program you offer to immigrants to Canada not only fills a real need in our province, but also fits in perfectly with the great effort our government is making in the whole field of education. We can reach the goal we are aiming for, only if we have the support of all our people and, I mean, their active support, not just lip service. So the educational program of the Jewish Immigrant Aid Society seems to me a very successful example of what a welfare association can accomplish. Indeed, it deserves to be imitated.

Any society finds that education is one of its most useful means to help absorb immigrants. Of course, when he arrives, a newcomer has to think first about his economic and social problems. We know that. Before bothering his head about Canadian culture, he has to earn a living. This economic integration may take quite a while. He may have talents and abilities which he cannot use in this new country because he lacks the essential tool, the language. I am delighted to see that your association offers courses in French and English for immigrants. It proves to be a great service in giving them the necessary instrument to make use of their abilities.

After a man is settled in a job, he wants to be socially accepted. I don't mean the immigrant waits to be completely established in a country to show some interest in the new society where he has decided to live. But first in his thoughts comes the question of how to make a living, how to set up a home for his wife and children. On the way he begins to know some Canadians, he meets them at work, his wife gets acquainted with the neighbours, his children play with other children in the street. Almost unnoticed, his social integration is under way. If he meets hostility, the process will be slowed down, will become difficult. On the contrary, if he is made welcome, he will feel that Canada is a friendly country where his problems are understood.

Obviously this social integration depends to some extent on the man himself. Canada is a new country, one very different from his own. He needs help to become familiar with the kind of society which henceforth will be his. Your association's plan of civic education is an excellent introduction along those lines.

I said the greeting the immigrant gets at the start is the first step in his social integration. It ought to show him right away that our society welcomes him, that Canadians are really generous at heart, that they show their generosity by curiosity and then by understanding. I don't need to tell you that we, French Canadians, have ourselves fought for many generations to preserve our own culture, our own language. This makes it easy for us to understand without explanation that an immigrant is attached to his mother tongue, his family traditions, his native culture.

Besides, we, French Canadians, know very well that immigrants newly arrived in Québec have to choose between two languages and two cultures. A few of them find an ideal solution to that problem; they don't reject either one. They draw on both sources and benefit from the riches of both. Others choose the culture which they think will open the greatest number of doors before them. Naturally, French Canadians feel the closest relationship with those who adopt the French language and culture. Clearly those of us who are trying to maintain our own language and culture welcome heartily all who want to join us in that effort.

I would like to call attention to the interest aroused in the Province by the Jewish efforts in French language and culture. I am thinking not only of your work, but of the activity of the "Cercle Juif de langue française" whose bulletin has introduced the cultural life of French Canada to those Jews who have lived here a long time as well as to newcomers. And I'd like to add that we, French Canadians, admire the loyalty of the Jews to their religion, their cultural, and family traditions.

Does it need to be said that prejudices do exist toward immigrants? In order to deny it we would have to keep our eyes shut.

Autumn Of The Critical Year Of 1963 Will See A "War College" At Hebrew University

BY ALLAN BRONFMAN, OF MONTREAL, NATIONAL PRESIDENT OF CANADIAN FRIENDS OF THE HEBREW UNIVERSITY IN JERUSALEM

The year 5723 will be critical for World Jewry, perhaps even more crucial than any during the past dozen years. Jews are on the move again, fleeing or trying to escape from the world's trouble spots, sore spots on the face of the earth created by Fascism, Communism, Nasserism, and yes, Nazism, too, the "isms" that feed on Jewish persecution and the suppression of the free Jewish spirit.

All Jews remember with pain, anguish, and heartache the tragedy that befell our generation, and we solemnly pledge that it will not, that it shall not happen again. But, really, what can we on the North American continent actually do about it? How can we dissuade Cairo from aiming its newly acquired rockets at Tel Aviv?

How can we aid the Jewish family seeking to abandon the turmoil and the terror of the North African communities? What are we doing to prepare ourselves for the responsibility of finding homes for the deluge of Jewish souls, which some day, we hope, will be allowed to pour through the Iron Curtain? What are our chances of instituting a successful emergency escape plan for South American Jewry, should the Nazi movement grow stronger there?

Obviously (and despite the "dialogues" between the leaders of Israel and North American Jewry) one of the answers is that both Jewish communities must be strong, physically and spiritually. Say what you will, if Israel fails or falters, gone would be our pride, gone would be our prestige, gone would be the position we hold as a people in the eyes of men. If the influence of North American Jewry diminishes, or if the American Jewish community were to vanish, the same would be true in reverse. Both communities urgently and almost desperately need each other, for each communicates much inner inspiration and great spiritual strength to the other.

During 5723, the most cogent challenge will be to arm Israel physically and to arm North American Jewry spiritually for any emergency. A major force in strengthening Israel and her people has been and continues to be the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. This is not a house of higher education dedicated to learning for learning's sake alone. Rather, from its very inception, the Hebrew University's raison d'être has been keyed to the destiny of the country, intellectually and scientifically.

Almost every avenue of life in Israel today has been influenced by the work of the Hebrew University: agricultural and industrial productivity; the language and the laws of the people; the nation's health and well-being; the education of her youngsters; the cultural enhancement of urban and rural life; and instances half a hundred more too numerous to describe.

The importance (importance to the future of the State) of the Hebrew University which now has over eight thousand students in four main centres, Jerusalem, Tel Aviv, Ein Karem, and Rehovoth, is illustrated by developments in two specific fields of activity. Urged by the Government, the University has spear-headed Israel's bid to make friends (and thereby strengthen ties and eventual trade) with the newly emerging nations of Africa and Asia.

She has taken students from these fledgling countries to help train their doctors, scientists, teachers, administrators, agronomists. She has sent teams of scientific and technical experts to these young states to help them instill and initiate the rudiments of nationhood.

And recently it was announced by the Knesset that the Fall of 1963 will see a "War College" inaugurated at the Hebrew University, a college at which Israel's leading army officers will devote one year of study and training towards the defence of the nation, should such an emergency arise. Israel's enemies are gaining in strength and are being fed modern and frightening armaments. Her army leadership, therefore, must at all times be ready to defend, not with determination alone but with technical, tactical, psychological, and scientific skills, and it is in this area that the Hebrew University has much to give.

The Friends of the University in Canada, as in all other parts of the free world, must rededicate themselves to the great needs of Israel's national house of higher learning. The progress made by the Hebrew University in so short a time, progress made with our help, is unparalleled, but no one can rest on these laurels for the challenges yet to be met on all fronts are unprecedented, and to falter or fail is as unthinkable as doing without a free Jewish nation.

I sincerely hope that the New Year will bring us all fulfillment

The Toronto Jewish Home For The Aged And Baycrest Hospital "More Years To Life And More Life To Years"

BY A. POSLUNS, 87 OLD FOREST HILL ROAD, TORONTO, PRESIDENT

The Jewish Home for the Aged began life modestly on downtown Cecil Street of Toronto in the year 1918. Very soon the crowded quarters and facilities which finally cared for one hundred and twenty residents became too small for the growing needs of the aged Jews of Ontario.

In December, 1954, a new building housing the Jewish Home for the Aged as well as the Baycrest Hospital was established at 3560 North Bathurst Street. Its facilities were modern; its staff highly qualified and dedicated to care for the residents with love and devotion. The Home was able to care for one hundred and sixty-five residents, and the hospital for eighty-seven patients. Since the time the building was opened, internal changes have been made to allow for an increase in the number of residents cared for to two hundred. The Home's motto, "More years to life and more life to years", was put into practice by an inspired team of staff and volunteer workers.

Remembering that inactivity is dangerous to the aged, the Home has provided a full program to stimulate their interest in life and their surroundings. More years to life are assured by the physical factors of the Home; the comfortable rooms, the careful adherence to balanced meals, and the comprehensive medical attention. More life to years is afforded by the occupational therapy, recreational, and spiritual programs.

A good-sized synagogue is located on the first floor near the front lobby. The residents look after the synagogue and, with the exception of the High Holidays, conduct services themselves. Next to the synagogue is the library which has books in Hebrew or Yiddish, and is attended by a resident librarian. All religious festivals are celebrated at the Home and the residents eagerly look forward to them.

A view of the landscaped gardens is visible from the cheerful dining room which seats two hundred. Meals are served from a spotless, completely kosher kitchen under the supervision of a Mashgiach. The residents sit in informal groups and since more than half of them are on special diets, the menu presents a real challenge to the dietitian and her staff. A committee of residents works with the dietitian to make suggestions and resolve diet problems.

Good food, comfortable rooms, and care of spiritual needs are important but at the Home this is not considered enough. Remembering that the greatest danger to the aged is to allow them to do nothing, the staff works hard to provide active interest. The occupational therapy program serves a dual purpose, to strengthen the limbs, and to improve the muscles. This program, supervised by trained professional personnel, fulfils this purpose. The residents are encouraged to work with ceramics, painting, rug-making, weaving, and toy-making. During the last four years such hand-made articles as sweaters, carpets, ash trays, etc., were entered by the residents in the Canadian National Exhibition, which is held in Toronto. Each year first, second, and third prizes were won by them in the various crafts.

Residents learn to forget their loneliness, old age, and their personal problems as they enjoy card nights, bingo games, concerts, dancing, and bowling, and participate in other recreational activities. Two full-time recreational workers, aided by a small army of volunteers, conduct a varied program designed to make the lives of the residents active and happy.

Baycrest Hospital, one of the few Canadian hospitals for the chronically ill which is recognized by the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation, accepts adult patients of all ages. It presently has facilities for only eighty-seven beds. There is a constant demand for admittance, but a patient must wait for more than two months before a bed is available. The hospital has an integrated medical program which provides for doctors from New Mount Sinai Hospital in Toronto to attend patients on a voluntary basis. There is also a full-time staff of qualified nurses, technicians, and therapists.

The Baycrest Hospital, and the Jewish Home for the Aged, as well, have not only rendered patient and resident care but take an active part in educational undertakings for social workers, nur-

MIRACLES
[illegible] just happen;
& they are caused.

Most scientific miracles aren't true miracles at all — but rather the results of increased knowledge. Germaine Monteil's Bio-Miracle Cream with Biotene is one such scientific miracle, and it has led to a whole new approach to the one beauty problem that faces all women — an aging skin.

Science has long known that many cells could regenerate themselves; and the active substance that led to this regeneration was isolated some time ago. This was big news in scientific circles, but meant nothing to women until the laboratories of Germaine Monteil discovered a catalyst which enables this substance to be introduced into the cells of a woman's skin to restore the regenerative impulse they may have lost.

Every woman knows what this means: a skin that lies sweet and sleek against the bone; her good looks, whatever their degree, un-marred; and maturity without tears. No one in the world has a formula such as

GILBERT D. SHORE
Asst. Agency Vice-President

Mr. Gilbert D. Shore and his associates of the Montreal Centre Branch wish to extend

Rosh Hashonah Greetings

to their many friends of the Jewish Community.

The Montreal Centre Branch, under the direction of Mr. Gilbert D. Shore, has held the record of the leading Canadian Agency in the Empire Life Insurance Company, for twelve years.

To those who have assisted us in establishing this record, and in maintaining it, we extend our sincere appreciation. The ever-increasing number of Jewish policy-holders is our pride, and we want to thank the Jewish community of Montreal and surrounding districts for the privilege of serving their insurance needs; and for helping us to expand at this wonderful rate of growth.

To serve you better, we have moved to larger premises to provide more efficient service, and our most modern and up-to-date offices are open, for your convenience, in Montreal's newest office building, the Place Ville Marie.

Recognizing the importance of encouraging thrift, good business habits and plans for security in the young, THE EMPIRE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY is pleased to be the first Life Insurance Company to introduce THE BAR MITZVAH POLICY. We are proud to have a part, with you, in helping to make the future of our young men and their families secure.

THE BAR MITZVAH POLICY IS THE FINEST BAR MITZVAH GIFT YOU CAN GIVE.

MONTREAL SYNAGOGUE FEATURES CONCRETE FOLDED PLATE ROOF

Structure: ADATH JESHURUN HADRATH KODESH SYNAGOGUE, MONTREAL Architects: MAYERS & GIRVAN
Consulting Engineer: BERNARD GELLER General Contractor: LOUIS DONOLO INC.

Among the new types of concrete roofs developed in recent years, the folded plate design is probably the most spectacular.

Folded plate shell roofs are noted for their fine appearance and their spanning and load carrying capabilities. In hangar construction they have been used to accommodate the great wingspans of jet aircraft. Their ability to cantilever has also been capitalized upon in churches, schools, stores, sports centers, and industrial buildings.

Despite their spectacular beauty, concrete folded plate roofs prove to be the most economical means of roofing buildings. Simplified design procedures and improved forming techniques have made them highly competitive with other roof systems long thought to be lowest in cost.

They presented the cheque to Mrs. Lieff which will complete their pledge of $5,000 for a room in their name in the Bat Yam Youth Center, in Israel. This new clubhouse for the religious youth groups in Bat Yam, a new suburb of Tel-Aviv, has been built by the Mizrachi-Hapoel Hamizrachi Women's Organization of Canada in cooperation with the National Religious Organization in Israel. It was dedicated in the presence of Mrs. Lieff, and Mrs. H. Bessin, chairman of the national administration board. This building will provide facilities for educational, recreational, and sports activities. Israeli studies have shown that clubhouses are a vital factor in keeping the youth of the country constructively occupied, thus reducing juvenile delinquency, especially among the children of underprivileged newcomers. The Galician Ladies Aid Association was organized in 1941 to send aid and comfort to relatives and friends in war-torn Galicia. Now it supports Israeli causes such as Youth Aliyah, Keren Kayemet, Histadrut, and Mizrachi Women's projects. They have voted to undertake another project in cooperation with the Mizrachi-Hapoel Hamizrachi Women's Organization of Canada.

When the shofar sounds

In the days of the shepherds on the slopes of Sinai, the ram's horn called the sheep back to the flock. Today as Jews everywhere turn back to a contemplation of the age-old truths first proclaimed by the prophets and then given to the world, we join with them in the greeting that they be "inscribed for a New Year"... a year of health, happiness and prosperity.

The Problems Of Synagogue Membership

BY CANTOR BEZALEL SILBERBERG, OF CONGREGATION SHAAREI ZEDEK, IN SAINT JOHN, NEW BRUNSWICK

Of late, there has been quite an effort, on the part of the central headquarters of the various Hebrew religious movements to ballyhoo their individual increases in synagogue and temple membership as well as the total strength of its supporters. Periodicals, published by these movements and bearing all these statistics have been distributed to congregations and individuals as well, with the mad scramble for acquisition continuing.

Just how far and how meaningful has all this scramble been? What has been the true aim of the individual movement? Is all this mere flurry of frantic activity or propaganda? Have the nabobs in their ivory towers given more than just passing thought about all this activity in terms of Judaism, rather than in terms of conquest? Could they be removed from their ivory towers to face facts?

Almost every clergyman in the field is aware of the real situation and how it affects his particular community. He is also aware of his being able to accomplish very little, with the result that he looks askance at these figures and sloughs them off with a shrug. Another casualty in the battle for expansion is the individual who counts himself as an adherent in one of the three main wings of Judaism. How he fares in the particular activity scope of his congregation is a matter for serious judgment and thought.

One of the inhabitants in this community at one time wanted to find out what a particular congregation offered its membership, and was referred to the proper congregational authorities. In the course of his discourse the man, told of how difficult he found it to get acquainted with his new locality, ignorant of the type of congregation and what he could expect from the congregation if the opportunity arose for him to become a member.

In the first place, the central headquarters of each movement is engaged in a battle of conquest, a battle concerning the movement's acquisition of every and any kind of synagogue or temple as its member. In the second place, the movement certainly isn't thinking in terms of the individual congregation, its problems, it needs, and its desires, nor is it giving any thought whatever to the lowly individual member who is the real spine of the individual congregation.

The newcomer had been a member of a congregation at his former residence, but upon moving, had had to forfeit his dues because of resignation due to his removal to another location. The newcomer revealed that he was a worker for a large firm, earning a decent living, which, after taxes, is enough to support his growing family, with very little extra left over for what would be considered luxury. Of course, there is always membership on the installment plan, but this is a drawn-out process and takes tremendous effort to even out the assessment with the congregation.

The central headquarters should cease the mad rush of congregational acquisition. This must be accomplished by their willingness to offer full inter-movement co-operation, with a pooling of knowledge as to locations of the individual member congregations. A master listing should be drawn up between the headquarters, giving in full the location, type of facility, clergy, and membership strength. An individual membership index should be set up by each of the headquarters and their number pooled so that exaggeration as to membership strength can be eliminated.

A series of accompanying area listings, covering all parts of the American hemisphere, should be published and distributed to every synagogue and temple, with explicit instructions for their imparting of information to one another, should the time arise when a member contemplates removal from one location to another.

With regard to dues paid by a member in one congregation, the suggestion is for these dues to be pro-rated so that in case of removal the remainder of the dues would be applied to his new congregation. Lastly, comes the freedom of individual choice of a place of worship by the individual, should there be more than a single facility in his new location. The time has come where a great deal of overhauling of statistics must be made, and where concern for the individual congregation as well as the individual member is uppermost on the agenda of the movement.

Ignorance of location is also no excuse, since the world, from the general viewpoint, has seemingly decreased in its size. It is a certainty that adherents of other faiths are made aware of houses of worship in other locations, at times when they are required to remove themselves, and this may apply just as well to adherents of Judaism.

The writer argues that all adherents of the Judaic faith are brethren, regardless of the ideology they embrace, and should therefore be apprised of religious facilities anywhere and at any time. Orthodoxy is no better than is Conservatism, nor is Conservatism any better than is Reform, for each idealistic aim is pointed toward better knowledge of God and His law. Co-operation among the movements must be vastly improved. All ideas and considerations must be made willingly by each movement, without thought of difference of opinion. Each should strive to co-operate with the other on the strict basis of Judaic precepts and nothing else.

The duty of the individual movements should comprise propagation of the faith, rather than propaganda for any particular wing. Braggadocio as to statistical strength should be likewise discarded, for it is unbecoming of the individual movements to cause or effect statistical rivalries among each other.

"I, AS A CHRISTIAN EXTEND TO THE JEWISH PEOPLE THE HAND OF FRIENDSHIP AND OF LOVE"

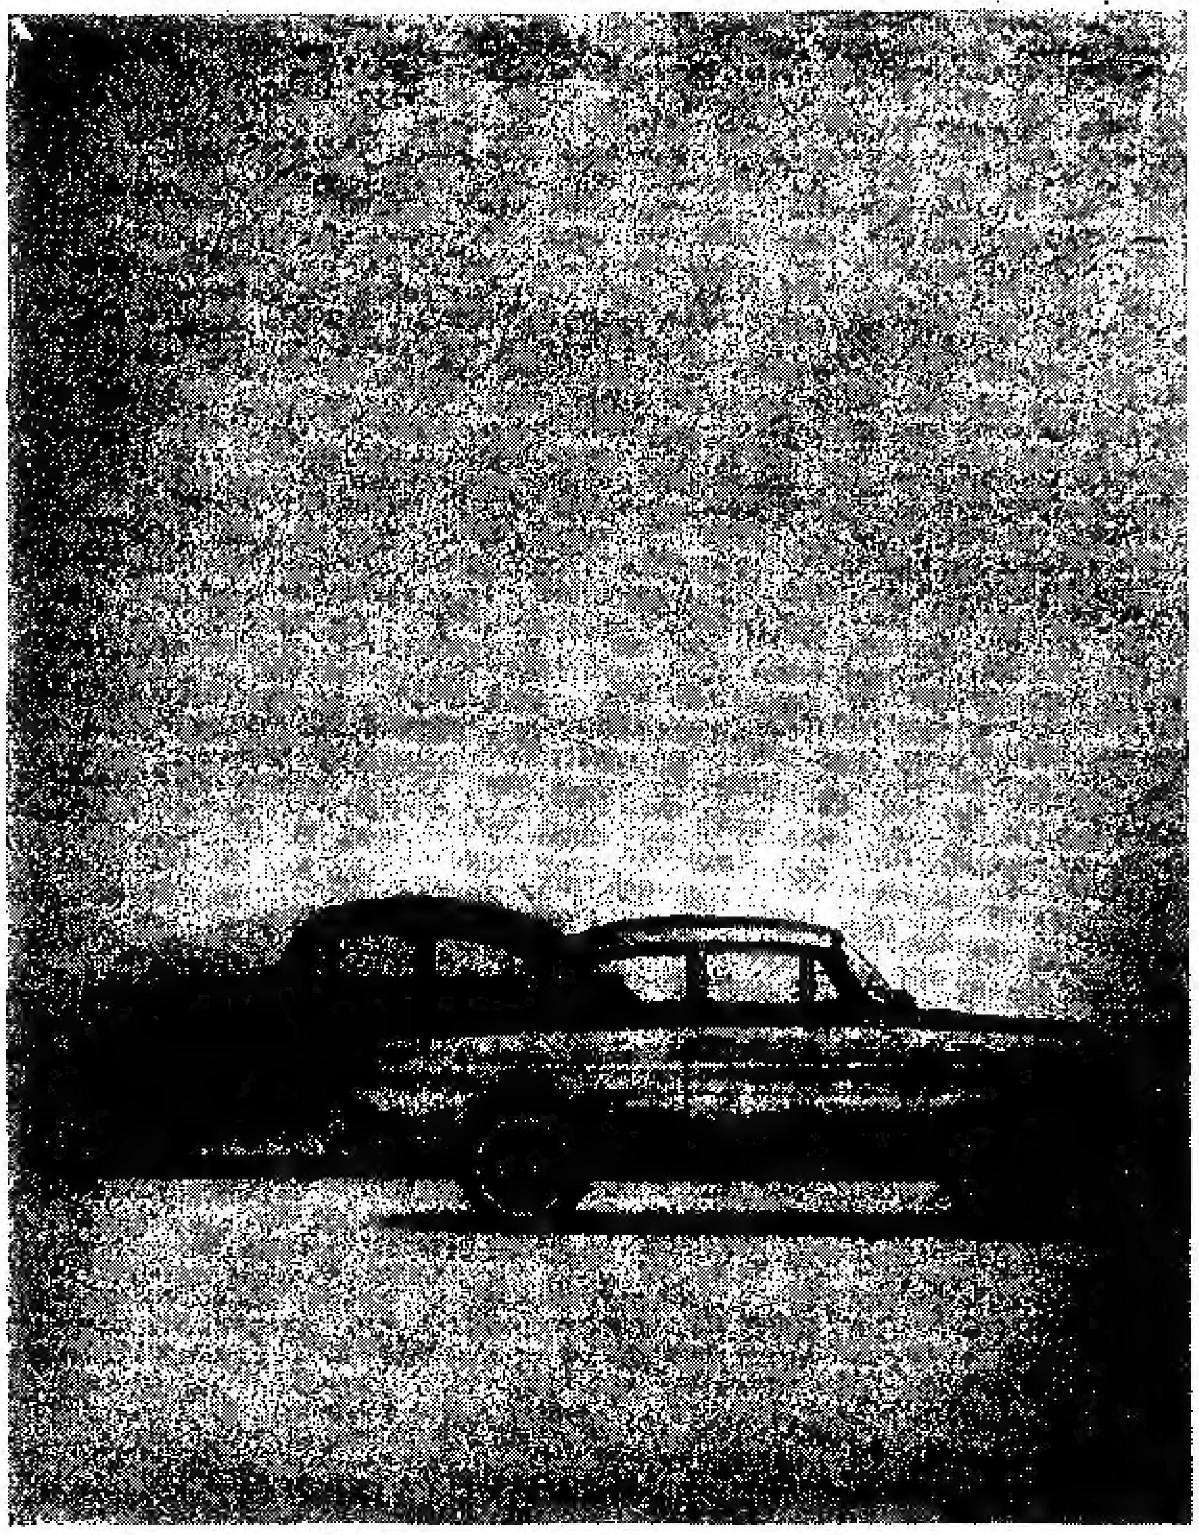
in common a country, vast and promising, in which we have faith and hope. In conclusion let me quote the beautiful lines written for the National Council of Jewish Women:

"I am a people that finds its greatness among many peoples
And mine is a heritage that yields nothing to time, to place,
That tarnishes only from indifference and inaction,
Therefore do I feel.
Therefore will I learn.
Therefore must I act.
Nothing is wasted, my search and my work,
For, as I give of myself to those in the outside world,
There is yet more of love and of wholeness within me
To bring home each day on my return."

I, as a Christian, extend to the Jewish people the hand of friendship and of love.



Is Volkswagen changing?

No, we are not discontinuing "old faithful". But we are changing our one model policy. From now on you will have a choice of two models—our famous 1200 model and the new VW 1500.

The VW 1500 is like its stable mate. It has an air-cooled engine in the rear.

Our new car is bigger, livelier, and offers more comfort. Once you have driven the VW 1500 (not just around the block, but over a longer distance) you will discover that it offers a whole new standard of driving performance. It has the responsiveness and road holding qualities of a sports car, and yet it has the comfort and convenience of a full-size family sedan.

The transmission, (synchronized in all four gears) is a pure delight to shift. Bucket seats (only recently rediscovered by so many automobile manufacturers and delivered as an option at extra cost) are standard equipment and can be adjusted to 49 different positions.

The VW 1500 is loaded with extras: heater, windshield washer, padded dashboard and sunvisors, armrests for all four seats plus a comfortable centre armrest in the rear, and many other items for which you would expect to pay extra. But they are all standard equipment. And you can trust us not to re-style the body each year to make your VW 1500 obsolete. If you would like to meet a car which combines sensible design, excellent roadholding and low operating cost, test-drive the VW 1500 soon.

VOLKSWAGEN CANADA LTD.

Immigrants often receive unjustified blame. A man arrives here as an individual. He embarks on an individual adventure, and he personally suffers the consequences if the adventure is a failure. It is not fair to criticize immigrants as if they constituted a united bloc.

And further, we have to distinguish between the Government's immigration policy and the immigrants themselves. Every citizen in a democratic regime has the absolute right, I would even say the duty, to criticize its acts and the policies it adopts. It is only natural that the Canadian citizen should have the right to praise or find fault with the Government's immigration policy.

But on the other hand, no Canadian has any right to hold an immigrant responsible for the Canadian Government's immigration policy. This policy concerns only the citizens of foreign countries whom we want to admit here or whom we do not want to admit. That may depend on the economic situation of Canada, the labour market, the jobs available, and the immigrant's own abilities. But once a man is admitted, the point of view changes. We no longer speak of immigration policy, but of integration policy. Then comes into play the responsibility of public bodies, welfare associations, professional organizations, indeed of all our citizens, to do their best to make a success of that integration.

I spoke before of the economic and social integration of the new arrival. These are only the first two phases. The immigrant has to earn a living, and his economic integration is a necessity unless he is to become a public charge, which after all, very few do. But he cannot live alone, in total isolation. He needs to establish human friendly contacts with his new fellow citizens. At first he will know only those who speak his own language and come from the same country. The ethnic associations play an important part in this social integration. Such a group is his only point of contact, the bridge that links him to the rest of the population. Through them Canadian life is explained to him, interpreted by people who speak his language and have been in Canada longer than he has.

However, little by little, the immigrant begins to widen his horizons, to extend his acquaintanceship. He begins to want to know persons born in the country he now calls his own as well as those from his original country. He wants to be part of Canadian society. Certainly he may run into difficulties, he may find this society closed, even impenetrable. He might then be tempted to retire into his shell, to say to himself that, after all, this new society is not so much better than the one he lived in where he came from. He cuts himself off from the life around him and shuts himself up in dreams and homesickness. Nothing can replace for him what he knew at home.

How can we fail to understand, to respect this feeling? Nevertheless, the immigrant who has left his native land, often of his own free will, can find compensations in Canada. No one asks him to deny his past, but his loyalty to it ought not to lead him to sacrifice his present and his future. We, Canadians, must help him to accomplish this second phase of his integration. If a man does not succeed in this, he will be the loser, for he will become a man without a country, he will not be really living in Canada, he will only be lodged there in spite of himself, far from his native land. And he will not be the only loser, for Canada will have lost an active citizen who had a real contribution to make and does not make it.

Now, I must speak of the third phase of the immigrant's integration, which he can undertake only after he has completed the second. I mean his cultural integration. It is the longest, the hardest, the most uncertain phase. It is full of hazards and its success or failure can never be measured exactly. But in spite of that, this cultural integration is the most valuable portion of the immigrant's absorption into Canadian life.

When I say this, I am thinking of the word culture in its widest sense. Every immigrant arriving in Canada bears within his own mind, his heart and soul, his most precious baggage, the most useful that he had for his new country, his national culture. I don't mean merely the knowledge he has acquired in school or university, though this too represents an inestimable capital. I mean rather the great civilizations of which many immigrants, even the most lowly among them, are the product and the beneficiaries.

A Jew who prays to his God reminds us that he is the heir and the living witness of the Word of the Bible, of the great secular civilization of the Hebrews. The Greek who has lived in the shadow of the Parthenon bears within himself, sometimes hardly realized, the marks of a civilization that belongs to all the world. I could go on to speak of the Italians, the Poles, the Rumanians, the Spaniards, and of all the immigrants who have come from many countries.

Two changes mark the cultural integration of the immigrant. You can say he is fully integrated when he becomes receptive to Canadian culture and when he begins to put his cultural heritage, the patrimony he brings with him, at the service of his new country.

Of course he is interested in the culture he sees around him. At first he is content to be inquisitive. But the more he knows Canadians, the more his integration is real, the more he wants to understand this new society better. From that moment he begins to participate. He wants to learn its history, its folklore, its popular arts. He reads books by Canadian writers. From discovery he realizes that he is entering a world full of riches, which he hardly suspected on his arrival. At the same time he discovers his fellow citizens as they really are, and in knowing their history, the way they spend their leisure, the way they celebrate their family anniversaries, he understands them better. It is then he can establish bonds of friendship based on mutual respect, which consequently will endure.

One of the important aspects of this integration is the interest the immigrant begins to take in public affairs, in the political life of his new homeland. The functioning of a democratic regime requires the active participation of all its citizens. After five years in Canada, the immigrant becomes a new Canadian. He can become a Canadian citizen, a most desirable move. From then on, his position as a citizen will stimulate him to learn about the political institutions of Canada and take part in its political life.

An essential part of this integration is the contribution the new Canadian brings to Canadian culture. As I said, he arrives with a baggage of traditions. He ought to use them to the profit of his new country and fellow citizens. To do that, he must have the opportunity to share his memories and his knowledge with others.

If he is to appreciate our culture, to be at home here, he must not be made to feel that he has to forget or throw away the culture of his native land. For only in remaining truly himself, in being faithful to his past, can be make a fruitful future in Canada. His integration is real only when it permits him to live a full life in his new country, and then fruitful for his neighbours because they gain from the cultural riches he has brought.

So it is necessary, for the immigrant, to bring his contribution to his new country in order that he himself may feel at home, may really be at home. And I must tell you that, during these recent years, Canada has experienced a flowering in the domain of the spirit which is still growing. We have only to take a look at what is happening in Montreal to appreciate how much our immigrants have brought us.

In teaching, in the field of dress designing, in painting, in the universities and laboratories, in journalism, we find them at work. Those who join with other Canadians to push ahead in the development of Canada form a very useful element, in some cases an indispensable one, in a burgeoning culture, and why should I not say a Canadian civilization which will blossom from Canadian soil, but which will also, thanks to our immigrants, have its sources in all other civilizations? A humanist culture and civilization, universal and fraternal, in which Canadians will be faithful to the heritage of their French ancestors.

We greet warmly the gifts of the new Canadians. Because of this, the failure of any immigrant to bring his contribution to our society can appear, in our eyes, only as a genuine loss. Doubtless he often wishes to be useful, to be a citizen taking part in the city's life. But he finds obstacles in his way, obstacles raised by misunderstanding and, sometimes, by prejudices. I believe we must clear away these obstacles, we must make it possible for the immigrant to be an active member of the community, we must give him full liberty to take part in Canadian life, so that the hopes and aspirations of all Canadians are as dear to him as his own.

In conclusion, let me say to you that the Province of Québec pays great attention to all the problems concerned with the integration of our immigrants. We need all the help we can get in the work of renewal of our national life which we are carrying out, we need the support and the vigilance of the whole population. The new Canadians must play their part, and our government does all it can to give them the opportunity. Because of that intention of ours, it gives me the greatest satisfaction to see associations like yours ready to back the government in its work.

the sacred interval as a joyful prelude to promise and hope for a full redemption in the new year and the worshippers accompany it with the cry of, "Next year in Jerusalem!" This exalted conclusion fortifies the mind and heart of all and helps dispel all the concerns and distresses of the Exile, the same distresses that the shofar itself had evoked at Rosh Hashanah and throughout the preparatory month of Elul. One can now look to the New Year with new faith and renewed confidence in eventual redemption.

The secure faith in the past and the hope of the present has always served and will continue to serve as the strongest spiritual bond to maintain our religious and national survival and to spin our historical destiny further.

Let us hope that the beginning of the redemption which we have been privileged to witness in our era will soon bring us to the great Shofar trumpet of complete salvation and will fulfill all the accumulated hopes of our long and trying Exile enabling us to gather together the rejected and dispersed of our people in their own reborn land. May we be blessed with the full realization for all our people of the daily prayer-wish: "And may our eyes witness Thy return to Zion." Righteousness will prevail and the prophesy, "Zion will be saved in justice", will be realized.

"IN THE ENVIRONMENT IN WHICH WE LIVE RELIGION CANNOT BE REMOVED FROM THE PUBLIC SCHOOL"

part ignored this opportunity with the exception of the Lubavitcher Movement and the Torah and Masora Group who had the field all to themselves and were able to enhance the'r fortunes very greatly as a result.

The problem hinges on our attitude to the principle of separation of Church and State. How important is that principle? What price shall we pay for its affirmation? Is there a price for its defence beyond which we would not wish to go?

I submit that important as is the principle of separation of Church and State there are at least two other principles equally valid for the welfare of the Jewish Community. These may be described as our relations to our neighbours and our relations to ourselves. The history of our people and the values of our tradition have never been satisfied with the role of live and let live but rather with the role of live and help live. The principle of separation of Church and State has been a great protection to minority groups, Jews included. We ought, however. to seriously reflect upon the fact that the majority also has rights which should be respected and encouraged when they can be exercised with safeguards towards all who differ.

In my opinion the Protestant Community is making a major error in leading the fight for religious education in the public schools. They are dramatizing the failure of their church school program and are in for an even bigger shock when in the future they will see the picayune and inconsequential results of their religious programming in the public school. That is my considered opinion as an educator.

The Protestant Community, however, has to learn this by its own experience, and has the sacred right to make its own mistakes if necessary. It should not be the task of the Jewish Community to make these others see the error of their ways or in any other manner to obstruct this program so long as Jewish interests are not damaged. The image that we want to create in Canada that will be honorable to the traditions of Judaism as well as true to the real desire of the Jewish masses in this country is not one that is neutral on the question of religion but affirmative.

We come now to the basic question: Is it possible to introduce religious education into the public schools without compromising the interest of the Jewish community?

Rather than prepare a theoretical answer let me give you case history. In Westmount, Quebec, I found myself thrust into a situation that was not of my doing but out of which I have learned a great deal and out of which I think the entire Jewish community can profit.

First of all it is important that I make an introductory remark about Westmount as a municipality. Westmount is an English speaking enclave in the greater Montreal area. Let anyone dismiss my conclusion with the remark that it applies only to Quebec and to French Canada, may I point out that Westmount is Ontario in Quebec, so to speak. Those who are familiar with the facts will understand what I mean.

As for the Jewish Community, Westmount includes a high proportion of its wealthiest elements as well as most of these families that are fifth generation in Canada. In short, you have environmental factors which make this a community which is integrated and highly assimilated. It is important to remember this.

Now to come back to my story: About fifteen years ago I was invited to a meeting of the Westmount Ministerial Association. There the reverent gentlemen informed me quite openly that in their opinion the Church schools were a failure and that the whole Sunday School system was inadequate for the transmission of their Protestant Christian heritage. On the other hand, the public school seemed to offer a fertile and invitingly convenient way to save the situation. Would I join together with them in a start of "united front" to the School Commission in demanding religious education in the public schools? Without Jewish participation they might still be able to get the program across but with great difficulty and possibly a real fight. With Jewish cooperation no one could oppose their request at all. They then proceeded further. If I joined with them in this program, they would see to it that the Jewish children would be offered not only exemption to the program, that went without saying, but the opportunity to be taught Judaism at the same time and as part of the program. While I was not too sure just how this could benefit the Jewish children I assured them of my cooperation and waited to see what would happen.

The School Commission granted this request. Before long public announcement was made and every parent received a questionnaire. They were asked first whether or not they would participate in the program which was to be entirely voluntary. Secondly, if they chose to participate they were asked to select from a long list of ministers in Westmount, including the Rabbis, which individual they would entrust with the religious education of their children.

I shall never forget the scene on that first Wednesday morning. About twenty clergymen descended upon the Westmount Junior High School. Those children who had volunteered, and they were ninety-nine per cent of the school population, were divided up denominationally with their ministers. There were United Church, Presbyterian, Anglican, Baptist, and Jewish classrooms.

Incidentally, this is something I learned. Jewish children and parents never feel that they are segregated when everyone else is also segregated. It's like belonging to a club. Jews were no more or less segregated in their program than were Baptists. Incidentally, by agreement with the other Rabbis, all Jewish children joined together in the Jewish education without regard to Jewish sectarianism.

The program carried on in this manner for several years. It began in the seventh grade, then moved to the eighth grade. One year it operated in the seventh, eighth, and ninth grades. Today it limits itself to ninth grade only.

In the fourth year of the program it was found inconvenient for the clergymen, all of whom are terribly busy men, to carry on the program themselves. The Christian groups hired professional teachers paid for by the School Commission and united the children in several classifications but on one basic program. At that point I also arranged for a professional Jewish teacher who was also placed on the Staff of the Westmount Junior High School. Incidentally, although each child receives only one period of religious instruction per week, the teacher is present for two and one-half mornings because of the large number of students and the particular system the school now follows of using the natural class schedule and not dividing up the whole school. This is the manner in which the program functions to this day.

What results were achieved? In the first place over ninety percent, of the children of all denominations participated on a voluntary basis. Over the past fifteen years the participation of Jewish children has been one hundred percent. Not only were there no Jewish withdrawals but we had the unusual sensation of Protestant children and/or their parents requesting permission to join the Jewish classes. In most cases such permission was granted.

Over the past fifteen years there was never any criticism of this program by Jewish parents on the ground of segregation. When you remember the kind of community Westmount is, this conclusion ought to be regarded as sensational. The only criticism I ever remember had to do with the discipline in one particular classroom, during the fourth year of the programme. Since that time we have used some of the best Jewish teaching personnel in Montreal.

I would say that the Jewish teaching program has succeeded more than has the Protestant program. This is due to the fact that we have regarded our work as supplementary. We tell the children that if they want a full Jewish education they should go to the Hebrew school as most of them do, anyhow. In fact, our program consists of the Jewish calendar, and the study of those sections of the Bible, such as Proverbs and Psalms, which probably they will not cover in Hebrew school.

Over the past fifteen years there hasn't been a single source of irritation in terms of Christian Jewish relationships in the carrying out of this program. The relationship is wonderfully cordial.

I have noticed something else. Before the introduction of this program, and even now, in the elementary and in the grades outside the actual ninth year religious education program, we have always had religious irritation such as New Testament study, reciting of public prayer, and so on. Since the introduction of the program all religious manifestations have been concentrated into the one hour so that there is no need for any Jewish child to ask for exemption. He has a positive substitute.

If this program is so successful, how is it that it has not been adopted elsewhere? I have not discussed this with anyone but I am willing to share my own speculative opinion. I think it is because the Protestant clergymen has discovered what I intimated earlier that by putting the brunt of their effort in the public school it is misdirected and the spiritual results are meagre. I predict the same spiritual end for the situation in Ontario.

Do I advocate this system for the Jewish communities elsewhere? Yes and no. In the spirit of the Jews of Chelm I would say, that there is only one system better than the one I have advocated and that is not to have to use it at all.

Separation of Church and State in the long run is better for the community. It would be a wonderful thing if religion could be removed from the public school. In the environment and society in which we live, however, it cannot be removed from the public school.

Do you believe that Christological influences have been removed from the public schools of New York City with a Jewish population of two and a half million souls? I have sat on many a Rabbinic Commission in New York wrestling with this problem.

If, therefore, the majority community is sold on religious education in the public schools it is my contention that instead of merely saying "No!" and pleading for exemption, let us use this alternative which is dignified, honorable, and voluntary, that of teaching Judaism to our children.

After all, it is no small achievement to have Jewish education carried on in the public schools, with public funds and by popular request of the majority group. Is it not that which some of us are advocating in other areas?

I submit that this is the kind of honourable alternative in religious education in the public schools which the Jewish Community has been seeking.

ses, interns, and hospital administrators. They have also engaged in such research activities as pulmonary function, diabetes, emotional disturbances, and causes of deafness in the aged.

Since the waiting list of the Home for the Aged has numbered from two hundred and fifty to three hundred over the past two years, the Home has attempted to meet some of the needs of these applicants. A Day Care program was established to help the people on the waiting list. Under this program the aged applicants are picked up and taken home by bus. At the Home they participate in all activities and are assured two well-balanced meals each day. This experiment in Day Care has led the home to believe that not only does it serve as a place to keep people happy while they are waiting admission to the Home, but that through this extension of services, it is also possible to help some people to remain in their own homes, thereby reserving the Home for the Aged for those people who have a greater need for it.

The new Home will have accommodation for three hundred and fifty-five residents. It will have provision for bed care cases as well as those people who are ambulatory. The present buildings will be converted into a new Baycrest Hospital with accommodation for two hundred patients. It will have an out-patient department to give continued care for residents discharged from the hospital, to care for the aged in the community who cannot easily reach other out-patient facilities, and also to establish a program of preventive medical care for the aged and chronically ill.

The Day Care Program will have greatly increased facilities which will enable it to extend its services to all those awaiting admission to the Home. It will also be available to those who can benefit from the program but either do not desire or need to be admitted to the Home. The Day Care Program will accept two hundred participants.

The expansion program will cost some $5,000,000 (five million dollars). As of this time, an amount of $4,200,000 has been reached. This includes not only contributions and pledges, but also anticipated government grants.

The success of this campaign is of course due to the many people who have contributed financially as well as having given of their time and services. The officers and members of the board of directors of the Jewish Home for the Aged and Baycrest Hospital; the members of the Women's Auxiliary; and the members of the Men's Service Group have not only served as a solid foundation for the fund-raising program, but also have been of paramount importance in the development of the Home and hospital since its establishment on Bathurst Street.

The officers of the Jewish Home for the Aged and Baycrest Hospital are: president, A. Posluns; vice-presidents, F. Godfrey, A. Levine, J. I. Oelbaum, B. Sadowski, M.B.E.; S. L. Shendroff; treasurer, A. Ginsburg; H. S. Rosenberg, Q.C.; D. B. Goodman, Q.C. The president of the Women's Auxiliary is Mrs. Samuel L. Gans; president of the Men's Service Group is Nathan Gold.

ican customs stems from the overwhelming numbers and proximity of American Jews.

In spite of his fortification by an educational background, traditionally British, the Canadian Jew has still adopted many American social customs. In Quebec, although the majority of native-born Quebec Jews speak French and English, French influence has not penetrated deeply. The educational system in Quebec, which has been mutually unsatisfactory to Catholics, Protestants, and Jews, accounts to a large degree for this state of affairs.

The last two decades have brought some changes to Jewish religious institutions. The Reform Temples have made enormous gains in their membership here in Canada by adapting some Orthodox customs. For instance, religious services are now held on Friday nights instead of Sundays. They have placed more stress on Jewish culture and chosen to ignore such ticklish issues as Jewish dietary laws, the latter of which has been fighting a losing battle with the younger Jewish families, in any case.

Conservative and some Orthodox Synagogues have answered this challenge by using Reform techniques, laying the stress on the Synagogue as a community centre and attempting to "Americanize" their whole approach. Consequently, Temples and Synagogues are becoming large community centres but religious knowledge has slipped into the background. This position is parallel with the Christian Churches.

The zeal of Jewish immigrants for secular education is manifest in the tremendous percentage increases in literacy, higher education, and University degrees among their members. A long line of Canadian Jews has made noteworthy contributions to government, industry, commerce science, the arts, and philanthropy. In most cases the true nature of their contributions was either national or international and not sectarian in any sense, so none need be singled out for special mention.

Prosperity has changed the face of many Canadian towns and cities. Jewish people have flocked into new suburban sections. Unfortunately, the older Jewish sections, some of which were slum areas, are being filled with New Canadians, partly due to housing shortages, which in turn is accounted for by economic pressure.

In myriad other respects Canadian Jews have adapted and are continuing to adapt themselves to their environment. Only a rare, old-fashioned Jew realizes to what extent. The post-war creation of the State of Israel attracted only funds and visitors, not settlers, from Canada. The Canadian Jew realizes Canada's future is his. At the rate set by the past, the possibilities of future adaptation point in the direction of the next step, a large degree of total assimilation.

vagaries of wind, earthquake, and fire. We may agree or disagree with Elijah's judgment that the Lord was not in them. We do, however, know the actions of men. We do distinguish between good and evil, between righteousness and unrighteousness. We can, if we will, "seek the Lord and find Him." We can if we will, "call upon him and He will be near." During this season of High Fidelity, we find the answer to Elijah's question: Where is the Lord? He is in our reconciliation with our neighbors, in the historic process of establishing a unity of spirit among the family of nations. He is in the resources of this bountiful world, and in the moral sensitivity and the goodness of man.

MONTREAL MARRIAGES

HUBLER-SHAPERA

The marriage of Miss Freda-Lee Shapera, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Shapera, 5549 Queen Mary Road, to Beno Hubler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sebastian Hubler, of Istanbul, Turkey, took place at Shaare Zion Synagogue, on Tuesday, September 4, at half-past six o'clock, Rabbi Maurice S. Cohen officiating, assisted by Cantor Solomon Gisser and the Synagogue choir. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white, lined antique silk organza gown; fashioned with a boat-shaped neckline; long sleeves; and a high cummerbund waistline with long, bell-shaped skirt, and removable court train. Her bouffant veil of tulle illusion was arranged with a pill-box hat which matched the cummerbund, and was attached by sprays of orange blossoms on which had been worn by her mother on her wedding day. She carried a prayer book with white Sweetheart roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Mrs. Marvin Greifinger, sister of the groom, was matron of honour. Her gown of pale blue, taffeta-lined organza, was made with a scooped neckline; cap sleeves; and skirt which was bell-shaped and appliqued with flowers of a deeper shade. She had a white bandeau for her hair; and carried a cascade bouquet of mauve pom-poms with yellow roses. Miss Louise Shapera as her sister's maid of honour, wore a gown of sky-blue organza entirely embroidered in white silk, and fashioned with a high neckline which extended over the shoulder; also a matching, veiled bandeau; and carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses and mauve pom-poms. Marvin Greifinger, of New York, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man. Yellow and mauve gladioli lined the aisles of the sanctuary and flowered bowers decorated the altar. Samson Rosemarin played the wedding music. Mrs. Shapera, mother of the bride, was gowned in blue chiffon. The bodice was embroidered in beads of the same shade, and made with a cowl neckline which ended in free panels at the back, and three-quarter-length sleeves; and the skirt was full. Her draped, pill-box hat was of the same material; and her corsage was of white gardenias. Mrs. Hubler, mother of the groom, wore a sapphire-blue lace gown, with its own long-sleeved jacket; and a white hat; and her corsage was of white orchids. Mrs. B.
